DOMINION WILL HAVE LAND SETTLEMENT AND RURAL CREDIT BILL

TWO MEASURES WHICH WILL BE BROUGHT UP WHEN PARLIAMENT REUAMS

Winnipeg, Feb. 22.—An Ottawa dispatch to the Winnipeg Telegram to day says:

"Agricultural credits and soldiers' land settlement will be the two measures that will be introduced into Parliament by the government in April. Legislation embodying the government's proposals to furnish cheap money to farmers and to settle lands will be introduced in council, and is now in course of revision. Sir Thomas White has said that the agricultural credit measure is being prepared by a sub-committee of the Standing Senate Committee on Permanent Board.

"Both of these propositions will be introduced by permanent board, and will not be permitted to become political issues. It is proposed that a bill will be introduced that a board of three will be appointed to administer both the agricultural credit and land settlement funds. This board will have similar powers and permanency of the previous board, railway and public works commission.

"The permanency of the boards will eliminate the danger of political patronage. Details of Sir Thomas White's agricultural credit measure have not yet been disclosed, but it is understood that it provides for the loaning to farmers, on mortgage, sums equal or greater than those given by the former commissioners, and a rate of interest equal to the cost of money to the government for the purpose of utilization. These loans will be repayable in 10, 12 or 30 years in equal annual instalments. The agricultural credit board will have complete authority and will organize the work of placing loans, inspection and collection.

Soldiers' Land Settlement

Soldiers' land settlement under federal supervision, and legislation for such an arrangement will be introduced to be applicable only to lands on the prairie and in British Columbia. It is intended that the government will retain control of the public domain.

It is quite probable that the federal measure will be almost the same lines as that proposed by the Ontario government. Each soldier who desires to engage in agricultural work will be given a quarter section of land free of charge. The land will be cleared and 20 acres broken. The land will be free, but improvements will be charged at a rate which will stick to the value of $1,000 per acre, and each acre will be charged $100 per acre.

But I am sure that the principal interest will be removed by the first three years. Soldiers will be transferred until five years settlement, and then will be eligible for permanent settlers.

The land will be allotted, will not be transferable until five years settlement, and will be allotted by a permanent board and political patronage eliminated."

Meadow Creek Notes

The Pie Social at Schaffer school was a huge success (?) As 1000 the crowd from one direction came within half a mile of the school and, not seeing any light, returned home. An hour later another party came to the school. (The junior had run away to the city.) The girls had come to the key to his home four miles away, and had come through the snow, and through the window, lights were turned on and a fire started. Half an hour later others came—through the window. After getting warmed all departed the way they came and returned home. Let me say the "crowd" consisted of four ladies and four gentlemen and one child.

The dance at Carlford passed off pleasantly.

For the 20th time the Meadow Creek farmers are trying to get their threshing done.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. De Forest have returned from Winnipeg.

Mrs. R. G. Bissett is again at the Creek.

The horses around Schaffer are in quarantine for glanders.

R. G. Bissett and daughter are enjoying a pleasant visit in Winni-

In Full Retreat

Homer Lawrence, in the Homeless Committee, that as a result of the operations on the Tigris river front all of the Turkish positions from Samarat to Kut el Amur have been secured and that the town of Kut el Amur automatically passes into the hands of the British.

The Turks of the Tigris river front are in full retreat toward Bagdad, 24 miles to the west of Kut el Amur.

Somewhere, in between the over-weight cars at extortionate prices and the under-weight cars at figures that are frivolous—there is a value which is the "happy medium" equally suited to your purse and to your needs.

If you pay more for your car than the price of the GRAY DORT you will not get proportionately more merit-for-money; if you pay less, you will not get nearly so much saving. The two years of hard work and preparation and liberal design preceding this car's appearance, before PRICE was even thought of, "The result is a happy-medium cost for a superlative performance car."

PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS

An election in the near future seems now to be a possibility. The Conservative members in the house for some reason or other appear to be anxious to extend the term of office of the Provincial Government. In view of the charges of dishonesty that have been made by the opposition, it would be reasonable to assume that they should even suggest that the reins of power be no longer left in the hands of the Conservative party. To the Liberal party to extend its term of office themselves, we believe would be the best guarantee of the rights of the people. If they have the right to extend it one year, who is to say that they could not make it a life job?

There is nothing good for the cause of parliament.

Elections have been held in most of the other Provinces since the war began. It is evident that the Conservative party would do well to hold its election as soon as possible. In any case the Provincial government has nothing to do with the war operations. The election in the Sifton government was the way go on just the same.

The opinion seems to be growing that an election to the treasury at this time would be a wise move. The present government has put through a lot of unnecessary legislation, and is now considering another bill, which will give far-reaching results if passed. It is almost time that the voters had an opportunity to accept or reject the proposed policy of the Sifton administration.

THE LIQUOR ACT

Statistics have been compiled under the direction of the Attorney General to show the effects of the Liquor Act during the first six months it was in operation.

For purposes of comparison several years were chosen, 1912-13, years of about the same length as the present. These periods were under Stevens and the record of convictions for drunkenness for 1912-13 was compared with the record for 1916, during the time that prohibition was in force.

Convictions for all offenses during 1912-13 inclusive were 26,148, and per year for 1916-17, 19,112, a decrease of 26 per cent.

The convictions for drunkenness during the four years, 1912-15, were 8,722, being a yearly average of 2,182.

The convictions for drunkenness during the first six months of prohibition were 197, a decrease of 91 per cent.

From these statistics it would appear that the Sifton government has accomplished a good deal during the short time it has been in force.

NON PARTISAN LEAGUE

Mr. Editor.—Steadily the truth is looking out, and it looks as if some of us farmers have been fooled again.

This is the opinion of those, according to the Calgary papers, to "Get Rich Quick Gents." The U.P.A. is a political organization that stands for a stock selling proposition, and the Public Utilities Commission turned their decision over to the U.P.A. The U.P.A. wanted to ban $300,000 water stock out of the market, and the U.P.A. said, "Yes."

I believe we need a Non-Partisan League that will select honest independent candidates, but not a fourth party nor any graft in the work of organization.

Please do not let me mistake, Mr. Editor, and I hope your next paper will give us a little light on this point in the people's organization.

Yours truly,

FOXY.

No International Conscience

New York, Feb. 20.—John Griswold Hibben, president of Princeton University, speaking in a church here last night criticized the United States for what he termed its lack of "international conscience" in failing to join the Entente alliance against Germany, and reduced America's entrance into the war a "solitary obligation."

"I am free to confess that America, as a nation, has not risen to the appreciation of the obligations resting upon it. What have we done for Belgium? We have grown rich out of that country's misery. We have not the vestige of international consciousness."

"I do not wish to see Germany crushed, but I do wish that over this ambition of a world empire which Germany has had for the past 10 years there should be written our word, and that word is failure."

One of the strongest acts ever assembled for a screen production is seen in the Mutual Masterpiece, De Luxe Edition, "Fatherless," which comes from the Red Cross on Monday and Tuesday 5th and 6th.

This is a pretty story which has a great deal of comedy in it. Its scenes are the scenes of a kindly old hotel, the Fifth Avenue mansion of his brother, the South Sea island home of his wife, and the hotel where the son is staying.

The plot is wonderful throughout. Miss Courtot, at first the unattractive little country girl, pleased with her mother's love, becomes a top assistant, develops into a society belle, a role that gives her opportunities equal to pleasure when she decides to leave the hotel.

The Squire's Sweetheart

— BY —
KATHARINE TYNAN

WARD, LOCK & CO., LIMITED
London, Melbourne, and Toronto

It had been opened by a tall fair man, with a palette held on one hand. The ball had stopped, and he had stepped straight into the half-sitting-room, without which no house of its type is complete. He was a man who had been used by Mr. Egerton as a studio. He had a good northern light to two windows, and a small easel, with a painting when they had knocked at the door.

"Aye, come in," he said; "how'd ye do? You don't mind if I go on painting, do you? The light is particularly good for Louise, this is Mr."

He stopped suddenly, and laughed. The handsome, dark young woman who was posing for him, a veil of blue lace over her hair, and a hand arm supporting the sleeping chin, frowned. The man was so debonair, so full of his golden fairness, that the Squire, rather wondered she could frown.

"My name is Mazyred," Hilary said, smiling Silverly, "and this is my cousin, Hilary Strangways."

"Ah, delighted to see you, Take a chair," said Mr. Draper, "Mr. Egerton's moved Susan's head a little, Louisa, and I think you'll be more comfortable that's right. I always talk better when I'm painting. You'll have some tea?"

Despite his prejudice against Mr. Draper and all his works, the Squire could not help but be interested in a chancing one. It was plainly white washed, and the floor was stained and became darker as the lighted lamps were low book cases around the wall. A volume bound in parchment lay on the floor, and the Squire knew that Egerton's head had it. It had evidently been in use for a few pages lay open. There were new bits of paper and glass, standing about as though laid down carelessly, some bits of brilliant yellow still clung to the walls or floor, leaning against chairs and bookcases. The was something bizarre and delightful. The color of the book cover, Mr. Egerton was wearing—a deep violet blue. She had sometimes seen a night sky in summer, and gold stars in a very beautiful. It brought out the dark beauty of Louise. Egerton's face was pale, the way he looked straight as falling water—which hung loosely about her.

"I think I'll leave," Leo" she asked, in a plaintive voice. "I want Dolly to see to the tea."

"You can't move," said her husband. "If you move you'll spoil everything. Dolly was gardening out there now. It isn't often the light is so good."

"Let me go," said Hilary. "I'm not strong, but I'm not ill. I'm not fatigued. I'm not tired. I'm not ill. I'm not ill. Just let her wear what she wants."

Hilary went away alarmingly. He would not trust her to the sunsets. With a pleasurable feeling of anticipation, he followed the gauntlet back to the house, where he could see her smiling at him.

She was not alone. She was talking to a man; and there was a certain roughness about the man which made the Squire wonder at his assumptions. His eyes had apparently been helping Miss Egerton—that is to say, he had been watching her, for the two stood side by side before a newly-turned bed, and he had his fingers with which he might have been measuring the ground.

He put his hands in his pockets and, elegant he himself looked as he came up the garden path towards them. He challenge he was unaware of in his eyes. The other man looked back at him, with a smile, and then he saw that he took no trouble to disguise. He stood squarely where he was, with his hands in his pockets, in the place as Hilary.

"I beg your pardon," Hilary said, "I did not know he was a ruffian." He said, with a shade of respectability, "I am a soldier, and I keep the village shop, and runs Miss Egerton's general store."

Again the girl's face changed. It was an extraordinary face for changes.

"I did not know he was a ruffian," she said, with a shade of respectability, "I am a soldier, and I keep the village shop, and runs Miss Egerton's general store."

"I will go," she said, and looked as though she were afraid.

"She has no strength, and I am a stationary expression. She turned New Cottage. The man who had been talking, looked at Hilary with a smile, and then he saw that he was aware of his eyes. His eyes were yellow in the whites of them. Hilary, if he had been talking, looked at him with a smile, and then he saw that he was aware of his eyes. He forgot the incident when he came up with Miss Egerton, who was the most beautiful for her eyes being full of sleep, and the strange, bewitching way in which she walked.

CHAPTER V.
For Soldiers Will*Settled in Canada

From an Interview with Lord Northrop by Vickie Rogers in the Saturday Evening Post

A great many people are worrying themselves about after the war, and whether women will do men's work. Well, we have found out that a great many men are doing women's work. Lots of young men in your country who read that would soon find that they are doing women's work. We are doing in the United States in any of the ways mentioned, but the women now doing men's work, well, they are being made immediately by the attitude of women. A very nice young man, who is a soldier, has written to me lately, and of course, not able to write uniformly, being an officer in the army, and he says, "I am a soldier, and I could not stand the stares and whispered comments of women."

All our banks are being run by women. I do not think any young man would be willing to do that sort of work any more. My own bank, which is as old as the hills, is run by women. They are quite as able as men. Men club servants, waiters, bussers, footmen and flunkies have gone. Each day sees a new turn in the career of the maid.

During the manservant who has enlisted, and goes home from the front, the maid takes his place, expresses very volably very sentiments that he will never do that sort of work again, and she is right.

What will become of these young soldiers? Many of them will return to their families, which they are not, but not in clerical capacities. They will be higher up, have less to do with their wives. Still, it will be as late as what the young soldier at school finds when he comes home, that she is the woman, and that fact, I imagine, will lead to a complete change in the attitude of women in England, but in the whole world.

The Canadians and Australians are very patriotic, and the English, the lusty young gunners and trench-busters; but we do not mean to let too much of that out.

I have no doubt that very attractive propositions will be offered to them.
